

#CEPAPolicyLecture No. 2 Evaluation of Too-Big-To-Fail Reforms Date: 26 May | 17:00-18:00

Speaker: Prof. Dr. Claudia M. Buch
Vice President of the Deutsche Bundesbank

Moderator: Prof. Dr. Matthias Kalkuhl
MCC Berlin and CEPA, University of Potsdam

About the Speaker

Claudia Buch studied Economics in Wisconsin, Bonn and Kiel. She worked at the Kiel Institute for the World Economy (IfW) and became Professor in Economics in Tübingen 2004. With her long-standing research focus on financial markets and financial stability, she became Vice President of the Deutsche Bundesbank in 2014.

About the Policy Lecture

Economics provides tools and methods for analyzing and evaluating policy measures that focus on important social, political and economic problems. Still, there is often a perceived gap between academic analyses and the political reality. The Policy Lecture therefore seeks to bring together high-level policymakers and policy advisors with researchers and advanced students in the field of economic and environmental policy.

The key objectives of the Policy Lecture are:

- Understand how policymakers view economic research
- Understand how research can have an impact and why research also fails to have an impact
- Engage in discussions with high-level policy makers and policy advisors
- Identify personal career options in the science-policy interface

Audience

The Policy Lecture is open to all Master students, PhD Students and researchers at the University of Potsdam and our partner institutions in the Potsdam-Berlin area (MCC Berlin, PIK, DIW, BSE). Master students of the Economic Policy and Quantitative Methods (EPQM) Master program are especially invited to participate.

Registration

www.uni-potsdam.de/en/cepa/events/policy-lectures

Contact

Stephanie Massar | info-cepa@uni-potsdam.de