ANGLOPHONE MODERNITIES IN LITERATURE AND CULTURE

Master of Arts

Program Content

This program focuses on literary and cultural phenomena encompassed by the concept of „modernity“ - a term that comprises both an historical epoch and a specific social experience. Using a combined literary and cultural studies approach, you will be studying a variety of methodologies and their explanatory power as well as their applicability to modern issues and questions.

In order to reflect on the differences between various academic cultures, you will also spend one semester at one of the partner universities of the University of Potsdam or at another university of your choice, and you will prepare a detailed report on your experience abroad. In exceptional cases you can substitute your semester abroad with serving as a mentor for international students at the University of Potsdam and by writing a detailed journal about your experiences during that time.

Program Objective and Future Career Options

The goal of the Master's program "Anglophone Modernities in Literature and Culture" is to deepen your knowledge and understanding of diverse aspects of modernity in the English-speaking world. You will learn how to productively and critically engage an array of frameworks of interpretation, description, and analysis that are often in conflict with one another and that come from different historical, disciplinary, or regional contexts. The program's international orientation facilitates multifaceted work and increases your intercultural skills. In addition, you will learn how to do academic work independently and to present your research results appropriately in a Master's thesis as well as in oral presentations.

Future employment opportunities in teaching and research are available in the fields of English/American cultural or literary studies at institutions of higher learning. In addition, this Master's program will open up professional prospects in areas that demand specialized knowledge in literary and cultural formations and diversity in the English-speaking world. This includes specialized journalism, publishing, and work for foundations as well as translation and public relations. Thanks to the cooperation with international partner universities and institutions, you can also work in international business management, in archives, or in libraries.

Program Structure and Curriculum

During the four semesters of the program you will earn a total of 120 credit points (CP) from the following modules and your final thesis. For additional information, please consult the subject-specific Degree Regulations: www.uni-potsdam.de/en/studium/studying/legal-foundations/studyregulations

The language of instruction is English.
